THE STATION SITE.

No sane man doubts that the Saskatchewan R.R. is going to prove of great benefit in developing our town and country, at the same time no resident of the town doubts, that the sooner its terminal point—for the present—is located, the better it will be for general business. The uncertainty at present existing, in connection with the station site prohibits legitimate transactions in real estate, and stops for the present any active building operations, apart from such as may have been started previous to the wire pulling efforts which have been witnessed here during the past eight or ten days; the grasping powers of the company have been fully displayed, and the public have been made to realize, that although their united action went far towards securing the company a fat subsidy, their interests must be put in jeopardy and their accommodation made subservient to speculation. While property owners both East and West are justified in trying to raise the values of their holdings, others have claims which must not be overlooked. It should not be forgotten that the Mackenzie estate offers advantages no other available site can possibly give. Apart from the convenience such a location will prove to seven-eighths of our business men, it is the central location for nearly every farmer in the district. While these and many other considerations will not count for much with property holders away from the centre of the town, we feel the railroad company should view them in a favorable light and choose this estate as a location for their buildings, thereby securing to themselves the large property interests already offered, accommodating a large number of people who will use the road, and equally dividing distances between the eastern and western elements, who thus far have been fighting hard to secure all the accommodation for one or the other of themselves without very much consideration being shown for the wants of the bulk of our population.

Considerable amount of street talk has been indulged in during the past few days owing, it is said, to the action of our Public School Board in connection with their purchase of books for the High School branch, which, if true, demands the serious attention of the ratepayers. This far our school system has been an institution in which all took pride, and every effort must be used to keep it in the future as in the past, free from scandal. Feeling this we claim it is not fair to the Board, nor in the interests of the system they now control, that insinuations frequently made, during the past few days, should be repeated without placing the public in possession of all the circumstances. The fact that several different tenders were asked for so small an item, before a satisfactory one could be received, may seem a little strange, as only two dealers were competing. But the Board must in the absence of any direct charge, or properly published statement, be held as altogether blameless. They are responsible men, and have no doubt done their duty in this particular case. We have never hesitated in calling public attention to their past actions when we considered them as contrary to the educational interests of the town. But we certainly feel that the methods adopted by them for securing books for the High School demand something more than street rumor before being condemned.

The above was in type before the letter which appears in another column was received. It is an important piece of information, and will be referred to in our next issue.

By a strange coincidence Jardine's tender for about $108 worth of public school books was forty-five cents less than E. J. Cann's.

It is satisfactory to note that at last the better judgement of our school board has prevailed, our suggestions have been accepted, and unless the board reverse their decision, work on the new school for the West End will not be long delayed.

We hope the important question of a free ferry, as soon as present lease expires, will not be lost sight of. It is easy to understand the large and important trade which we can develop with the country north of the river, and nothing will tend more in that direction than good trails and free crossings.

Virtue and truth are respected everywhere. We trust the readers of our last week's edition have accepted our statement, regarding the manuscript prepared for immigration purposes, and withdrawn at the last moment, our explanation being a little different from that of the injured editor. We looked, but looked in vain, for a contradiction.

Years ago an agitation was started with the object of securing a town by-law for prohibiting the running at large of cattle. The Council of that time wisely abstained from enacting any such law for the summer season to-day things are changed, a large number of our towns people owning cattle are not satisfied with the consideration then shown them and an innocent public are paying the penalty. Night after night is made hideous by the clang of the big brass bell and the cow, enjoying the fun, refuses to feed more than fifty yards from an open window. Guardians of the town should take steps towards stopping this infernal nuisance. Either pass a law at once prohibiting cows running about town during the night or make it legal for any ratepayer to dissolve the partnership of every cow and bell he may find wandering about the streets after dark.

The inexperienced editor of our River Street contemporary has satisfied us. The contributing of articles for magazines on several continents must be a simple matter compared with being managing editor of a joint stock paper, and the laborious duties it must entail, particularly so when an indefinite knowledge of local history prevents one throwing his whole ability into the work of developing our country. Seriously, though, we never expected that the Saskatchewan would present its readers with a full report of certain General Assembly proceedings, which we have agreed to not mention for a few weeks; neither did we think its managing editor had nerve enough to advise our publishing them. These columns have been kept singularly free from anything which might seriously effect one's private position, and we purpose keeping them so.

LOWEST TENDER.

Editor of the Times.

When the trustees of the Prince Albert School Board decided to engage a school teacher the secretary of the board was instructed to solicit tenders for requisite books for library and other purposes. The secretary accordingly waited on the two dealers in books, Jardine and Mr. Cann, informed of the decision of the Board, and the tender was to be final.

The two gentlemen accordingly sent tenders, each book required having a particular price duly quoted.

At this stage the trustees decided that the books specified were not required, and resulted to purchase only some of the special ones. The secretary again waited on the dealers and asked for final tender No. 2. Mr. Cann declined quoting any other price than that already given in his tender (in which the books were required were priced), having some unfashioned ideas as to the precise meaning of the word "final."

Dr. Jardine, however, was not troubled by any particular scruples, and issued a special edition of his tender. I beg to place Dr. Jardine's two tenders side by side for convenience of comparison:

	1st.	2nd.
Encyclopedia Britan.	$75	$85
Imperial Dictionary	25	25
Andrew's Latin & Eng. Dict.	7	6
Liddell & Scott's Greek Lex.	12	10
Butlers Classical Atlas	6	5

It will also be instructive to notice that, whereas, in the first instance Dr. Jardine's tender was $16.55 above that of Mr. Cann, yet, in the second instance it was 45 cents below. Dum venient stulti, vinum contraria current. Under these circumstances I would like to ask a few questions.

1. Did Dr. Jardine have access, directly or indirectly, to Mr. Cann's tender before the second edition was issued?

2. Did any trustee, directly or indirectly, inform Dr. Jardine as to the prices in Mr. Cann's tender, or was there in any manner (to partly adopt a now historic phrase of the Saskatchewan) any "crooked proceedings in low places?"

3. If these questions have to be answered in the affirmative, what does any man who lives in Prince Albert think of the honor, commercial honesty and uprightness of the parties concerned?

4. If the trustees have looked up the actual meaning of the word "final?"

Yours, etc.,
CHORAZIN.

FAMILY IMMIGRATION.

Every one that is at all familiar with the farm life of the new Northwest must have been struck by the number of family groups to be found in every part of the country, and by the large amount of average success attained by those families when contrasted with the results achieved by the same number of single-handed adventurers that took hold at the same time. It is not likely that all the members of such families will be found on the same lands that they took up as homesteads eight or ten years ago. One or more of them may have gone into the nearest town and found a position there as grain buyer, machine agent or store keeper. But whatever they may happen to have gone in for, it is rare to find them anything else than well doing and respectable citizens. The cause of these satisfactory records is not difficult to trace. A solitary individual may get on fairly well for a time, but somehow he backs down in too many instances and by and by he backs out. Life is too dull and slow, he sells out at the first opportunity and gets away to some happier land. But too often his "luck," as he calls it, is very contrariwise. He gets a habit of going to the nearest town, where he may see what is doing and have a game of billiards and a few drinks, and the oftener he goes there the more burdensome grows his bachelor life at home, or rather at the place where home ought to be but it is not. His team is probably left standing outside the hotel for a few hours, they take cold or rheumatism, and if he has other stock they do not seem to get along so well as they would with their owner always in sight. He has bad luck, gets into debt, frequent ly into drink, and drifts off to join the great army of tramps, dead beats and dead heads that prey upon the industry of the new world, just as standing armies of soldiery do in the old. A loafer and tramp is a worse load upon society than a French or German soldier can be, but people do not yet see that point as clearly as they will one day do.

Bring out a steady, capable small farmer or plowman from the best farming districts of the British islands or the eastern provinces, with a family of half a dozen sons and daughters, and dot down two or three such families in a township. Some of the sons may be able to take up a homestead not far from that chosen by the father, or what is better still, two of the lads may have come out a year or two earlier to spy out the land and secure suitable locations for the other members who are waiting the results of their search. They drive in their stakes at some likely place, and have some little preparations made for the reception of the rest. They can advise those still at the old home what part of their outfit will be valuable in the new place, and what must be sold as unsuitable. A place is ready for the balance of the family when they come, and once more united they feel strong enough to meet any ordinary emergency. The pioneer brothers have found out the quality of any neighbors that may have located there ahead of them, and with prudent management will avoid disagreeable entanglements. All of the family may not be miracles of skill, they do not need to be, for the more capable keep the rest in line, and their example stimulates as much as their counsel. They have family pride in their way, though they are plain people, and will not take a back seat as regards either the quality or quantity of their work. One has an aptitude for machinery, the next for stock, the third is given to experiments in fruit, grain or tree growing. If any one falls ill or meets with an accident or loss the rest can by a little extra effort carry them along. If a lonely bachelor around gets into the good graces of the daughters, he is a fresh accession to the strength of the clan, and they unitedly become a strong force in society in local or even provincial politics, and some day one of the boys from the family may take his seat in parliament as the worthy representative of his district. If one of them take to business, as he may do, every lad on a farm is not meant by nature for a farmer, he has still the old home influence to look back to, the family reputation to maintain, and at the same time to help him along and whether on or off the original homestead where he first struck root in the country, he will do credit to himself, his family and to his country.

This outline of the possible future of a capable family of farmers in this new country is no fancy sketch drawn by a frothy boomster. There is no privileged class here to claim a pre-emption of the highest positions in the west, and it will be found that the most influential positions are held by men raised by their own toils from the ranks of the farming and trading community. This class of pre-ferment is not always reliable, but it is certain that whatever may be their present position and individual success, the family composed of industrious parents with their children is the strongest force yet brought into operation for the permanent and satisfactory settlement of the Northwest. If this is so, it needs no further argument to prove that such families in older districts or countries ought to make careful enquiry about the merits of this country of great possibilities before they go elsewhere in search of a new home.—Western World.

The last issue of the Dominion Illustrated is an illustration of the force of example. The previous number was devoted to Victoria, B.C. Of course long before its appearance, the fact that it was due was well known in the North West. And not without result; evidently Calgary has quickly followed suite—the present number being almost entirely given up to that thriving western centre. Eastern Canadians would hardly expect that so much could be said about a place so young; but a glance at the pages of the Calgary number of the Dominion Illustrated will convince the most incredulous that Alberta and its fair metropolis command features of rare interest in scenery, resources, population and general progress and that even the best informed will find in this rich number the means of adding considerably to their store of knowledge. The illustrations (which are excellent) and the accompanying letter press are of historic value and are well worthy of preservation. Address: The Dominion Illustrated, 73 St. James St., Montreal.

To-day we received the following valuable and reliable information:—The Station has been finally located on the McKenzie Estate, just below the hill.

Hams, breakfast bacon, spiced roll and Ontario cheese at F. C. Baker's.

M. Kenny, of the South Branch, has located a new claim on Sec. 10, Tp. 46, Range 3, west of the 3rd Mer. For this purpose Mr. Kenny utilized his $5 land warrant. The warrant had expired through lapse of time, but through the energy of our member, Mr. Macdonald, and the kindness of the Land Department this difficulty was got over.

A meeting of the Council of the Saskatchewan Provincial Rifle Association was held at Mr. Agnew's office Wednesday evening last, when a considerable amount of business was got through with. It was decided to hold the annual meeting of the association on August 21st, 22nd and 23rd. The Association, Merchants, Macdonald and Clarke Matches will be held on the new range, while the Ladies' Match and distribution of prizes will take place on the Police range. This is owing to the bad state of the road leading to the new ranges, but we hope by next year to see this difficulty got over. We also hope this year to see our merchants and other citizens giving their assistance and encouragement as generously as in past years.

Rubber coats and circulars at F. C. Baker's.

Waghorn's Guide for July is out, embodying all alterations and additions to tables of travel by rail, stage, ocean and lake, and recording all changes in the general business tables of the Provinces. It gives all the new Post Offices opened and Mail service connection; the time cards of the different roads and useful through railway connections in a neat, clear manner; the sailing, fares, &c., of the Atlantic steamships and devotes space to the Dominion Lands and mineral regulations; municipalities, their boundaries and officials; Land Registration districts; ecclesiastical, military, legal, civic, masonic, &c. matters, in fact seems thoroughly and accurately to embody everything useful that is required, and with its maps of the province, Dominion and Winnipeg appears well to earn its right to the general testimony, that whatever you want "you'll find it in Waghorn's Guide."

STALE NEWS.

"Mr. D.J. Waggoner, formerly a familiar personage in Prince Albert, is pleasantly receiving old acquaintances and, no doubt, forming new ones. He makes no secret of the fact that the National Policy of this Government, of which he has been and is a supporter, is a failure. To the farmers of Ontario, of whom he is now one, it has brought injury and loss, almost amounting, in some cases, to ruin. From want of space we can do nothing more this week than simply allude to his views which we hope to examine, more fully, at a later period."

The above startling and soul-stirring intelligence, relative to a former well known timber agent, of Prince Albert, whose return to town—chronicled at the time, some four weeks ago, by this paper—has apparently only now been discovered by the amateur printing outfit on River street fell with "a dull, sickening thud" upon the hitherto peaceful tranquility of our town, and there is no doubt but Sir John and his Government will feel terribly chagrined and disappointed upon reading the local column of the Saskatchewan to find that Mr. D. J. Waggoner thinks the N. P. a failure.
